Nine Die On Kentucky Roads

Preliminary statistics* indicate that nine people died as the result of injuries sustained in seven motor vehicle-related crashes on Kentucky's roadways from Monday, Nov. 4 through Sunday, Nov. 10.

One double-fatality, motor vehicle crash occurred in each of the following counties: Bath and Madison. One of the victims in the Bath Co. crash was not wearing a seat belt.

One single-fatality, motor vehicle crash occurred in each of the following counties: Allen, Floyd, Green and Woodford. None of the victims were wearing seat belts. The crashes in Allen and Woodford counties involved the suspected use of alcohol.

One pedestrian was killed in Jefferson County as the result of a crash that involved the suspected use of alcohol.

Through Nov. 10, preliminary statistics* indicate that 551 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2013. This is 96 less than reported for this time period in 2012. Of the 421 motor vehicle fatalities, 210 victims were not wearing seat belts. Forty-four of the 70 motorcycle fatalities were not wearing helmets. The 10 ATV fatalities were not wearing helmets. Three bicycle riders have been killed. Forty-six pedestrians have been killed. One fatality involving an animal drawn vehicle has been reported. One person died when they jumped from a moving vehicle. A total of 123 fatalities have resulted from crashes involving the suspected use of alcohol. As of Nov.10, Kentucky has had 70 days with zero highway fatalities reported during 2013.

Citizens can contribute to highway safety by reporting erratic drivers to the Kentucky State Police toll-free at 1-800-222-5555. Callers will remain anonymous and should give a description of the vehicle, location, direction of travel and license number if possible.

*These statistics are still preliminary as KSP waits for all local law enforcement agencies throughout the state to report any crashes and fatalities that may have occurred in their areas.

County Elections Begin To Take Shape

By Wes Feese EDITOR

It's been one week since the Adair County Clerk's Office began allowing people to file for office in the 2014 election. With several positions up for grabs, including County Judge-Executive, Sheriff, Jailer, Attorney, Clerk, Property Valuation Administrator, Surveyor, and Coroner, as well as constable and magistrate positions, 28 individuals have already filled out the necessary paperwork to appear on the ballot.

Currently, the most competitive race appears to be that for Adair County Sheriff. Incumbent Democrat Harrison Moss doesn't have any challengers so far within his own party, but three Republicans are all vying for the position. Chris Janes, Justin Claywell, and Joshua Brockman have all filed, and will compete against each other in the May 20 primary election for a chance to run against Moss - or another Democrat, if one files before the Jan. 28 deadline and defeats Moss in the primary.

A three-Republican race is developing for the retiring Sheila Blair's position of County Clerk. Columbia Mayor Mark Harris, County Judge-Executive administrative asst. Lisa Greer, and real

Fiscal Court, Hospital District Discuss Future of Westlake

BY BLAKE SPIRES ASST. EDITOR

The November meeting of the Adair County Fiscal Court took place on Tuesday night in the Adair Courthouse Annex Basement. While the time and location were familiar, the nature of the meeting took a somewhat new turn, essentially morphing into an Adair County Hospital District board meeting for the first 40 minutes.

Hospital District Board Chairman Craig Pyles and CEO Neal Gold were in attendance at the request of Judge-Executive Ann Melton who had been asked by magistrates of the Court for an opportunity to speak with members of the Board.

Chairman Pyles began the discussion with a statement, telling the Court that the Board is still making progress and doing all they can to turn Westlake into a financially solvent entity and explaining the newly-issued Hospital Tax.

"It was a necessary evil," Pyles said. "Nobody wants a tax, but our goal is to get to a break even point, and that will help us do

Adair County Honors Veterans

By Wes Feese & Blake Spires

Servicemen and women nationwide were recognized Monday for Veterans Day, and Adair County was no exception, with ceremonies held both at Adair County High School and the VFW building Monday morning paying tribute to America's military – both current and former.

The program at the VFW, sponsored by Columbia's Wal-Mart, featured a free breakfast and keynote speaker, former state senator Vernie McGaha.

"It's humbling to me every time I get to stand before a group of veterans," McGaha told the crowd. "My hero isn't a professional athlete who performs amazing feats in the athletic arena or a rock star who makes big money singing. My heroes are sitting here this morning."

Adair County High School's program was led by students and focused on ACHS alumni that went on to serve in the military. After the ACHS concert band led the national anthem, each branch of service was honored individually.

Teachers Sheila Willis and Joanne Held – each of whom have a son that has served or is currently serving in the Marines – read a poem about mothers of Marines, and then each Marine in attendance was recognized.

Margaret Hardin and Ashley Simpson then honored the Army. Harden's son, Josh, enlisted shortly after graduating from ACHS in 1999, and she read the poem "A Soldier's Mother." Simpson's father recently returned from a tour in

Band Heads To BOA Grand Nationals

By Wes Feese EDITOR

The Adair County High

School marching band is in Indianapolis this week for the Bands of America Grand National Championships at Lucas Oil Stadium. Fresh off a runner-up finish at State three weeks ago, the Adair Band will face off against 90 of the best bands in America for a chance be named National Champion.

Even going up against such stiff competition, Adair Band director Tom Case says his squad isn't doing anything differently to get ready.

"We prepared the same," Case said Wednesday. "We've actually cut some time out of our practice, because at this point, they know the show. They're ready to go."

Ready or not, Adair will take the field at Lucas Oil tonight at 9 p.m. CT. They'll be one of 45 bands performing Thursday, and another 45 will take a turn Friday. The top 30 bands will be named semi-finalists and get to compete at the main event Saturday.

"It's called Grand Nationals for a reason," Case said. "You've got the best of the best. There's not a bad band there."

Adair already boasts an impressive resume heading into

The Weekly WORD Editorial Commentary Written By Wes Feese, EDITOR

The calendar says that we're still five weeks away from the first day of winter, but the temperature this week says otherwise. We had a dusting of snow on the ground Tuesday morning, and I was embarrassingly excited to see a quarter inch of snow on the grass – snow that wouldn't even last until lunchtime before it melted.

Still though, I took the surprising cold turn as a sign that one of my favorite times of the year has returned. I love so much about this coming season – food, holidays, food, basketball, food, football, and

First of all, the food. It's no secret that most folks' diets change a bit with the seasons. Cold weather means big, hearty meals – at least it always has for me. And yeah, Thanksgiving is dangerously close, only two weeks away. Big family get-togethers have always been a favorite of mine, and I'm confident this year will be no different, with familiar faces around a big table full of delicious food becoming a regular occurrence over the coming weeks.

Thanksgiving isn't the only upcoming holiday though, and even though we're a month and a half away from Christmas, I know from past experience that it too will be here sooner than we realize. The Thanksgiving/Christmas holiday season still excites me like a little kid, and I'm already looking forward to it. I love everything about the season except for Christmas shopping, which is a deplorable chore that I usually dedicate a couple excruciating hours to every year.

Other than the shopping though, everything about the holidays suits me quite well. It's a festive, happy time, with food and desserts that one might feel guilty eating the other 10 months out of the year, but during a cold, dreary season, seem absolutely

My job adds another aspect to the holiday season. Last year's Christmas season was my busiest time since I've been at the Progress. There were events, parades, programs, suppers, fundraisers, and meetings to cover, on top of the usual monthly schedule of responsibilities. As busy as I was though, I thoroughly enjoyed most of these assignments. Everyone's collective mood seems to brighten a bit during this time, even though the atmosphere outside is the complete opposite of bright. Happy people make me happy, and seeing smiling faces wherever I go makes this job exponentially more enjoyable.

It's the time of year when charities that have raised money for 12 months put their funds to use – to ensure that less fortunate children get Christmas presents and families that are struggling can prepare a feast for Thanksgiving. Covering "good news"type programs might not always make the most noteworthy story, but they're still my favorite events to cover because they make me proud of my community.

The other reason I love this upcoming season is sports-related. Kentucky basketball's non-conference schedule will fill out the rest of 2013, and every gameday is like a mini-holiday for many around here, myself included. It gives us something to talk about, even with U of L fans, because the one thing we definitely have in common is that we love our team and hate the other team.

College football season will wrap up soon, and Christmas will bring with it a slew of bowl games and background noise for family gatherings. The NFL postseason picture is already shaping up and the postseason picture will be fully painted by the end of the year.

All this was on my mind this week as went about my work. There will be plenty to do in the coming month, and I wouldn't have it any other way.

Pyles explained that the money would be used as the Board deems necessary, and that ideally the money would be used to pay toward the debt, but admitting that they would most likely need it for operating expenses as well.

"We could set it aside and say we didn't spend any of the tax money, but it's all sitting in the same bank account, so yeah, we'll probably dip into it," Pyles said.

"So is there a debt limit, or are we prepared to just keep losing," Flatt continued.

"We don't have a resolution passed on that," Pyles answered. "But we're not going to waste this money. If it has to close, we'll close it, but we feel like we're close [to breaking even]. What I'm not going to do is come to you all and ask for more money."

"The hospital is going to be what the people of the community make it," Pyles reiterated.

Magistrate Sammy Baked chimed in, voicing his support for the current administration.

"This Board has my upmost confidence," he said. "If this thing can be settled, I think these fellas can do it. They've stood up to outside factions, made tough cut after tough cut, and I just have full confidence in them."

Magistrate Flatt agreed wholeheartedly, again explaining that he was looking for answers to the tough questions and concerns brought to him by citizens of the county.

"We ask ourselves these same questions," Gold said. "We do everything we can to be profitable and operate completely free of the tax money."

Flatt pressed, noting that the Court had heard during the administration of Spectrum Health Partners that "in six more months we're going to be making money."

"We're not paying people huge salaries to keep telling us we're about to be making money," Baker pointed out.

Drama Club Performs The Magic Golden Apples Nov. 14th

The Adair County Drama Club invites all to join in their quest for The Magic Golden Apples. Come watch as the story unfolds on the quadruplet princesses' 17th birthday when four brave lords come to Lah-Dee-Dah to woo and wed the princesses. When the princes arrive, however, they discover there are only three princesses, and they think they're triplets. The princesses are unaware that when they were born, they were cursed by the evil Worm Wizard, making one of them disappear and the other three each suffer their own unique, eccentric and funny curse. Luckily, Sweet Bliss, the good fairy queen, presented the royal family with four magic golden apples, which would release the curse upon being eaten by all four princesses on their 17th birthday. If only they knew where the fourth princess was! To makes matters worse, Worm Wizard steals the magic golden apples, and it looks as though the princesses' curse will never be lifted. Loaded with fun and quirky characters, including Dogster the narrator and entertaining audience participation, this lighthearted comedy has humor for all ages. The drama will be performed at the Adair County Primary School on Nov. 14 at 7 p.m.

Lindsey Wilson Students To Perform 'Charlotte's Web'Thursday Night

Area residents will have an opportunity to see the dramatic production of what's been called the "Best American Children's Book" Thursday night at Lindsey Wilson College.

The Lindsey Wilson Theatre Program will perform an adaptation of the children's classic Charlotte's Web at 7 p.m. CT on Thursday, Nov. 14. The play is directed by LWC Assistant Professor of Theatre Robert Brock. The performance is free and open to the public.

Declared the "Best American Children's Book" by the Children's Literature Association, Charlotte's Web is a classic tale of love and close friendships. Published in 1952, the book was written by famed New Yorker contributor and children's author E.B. White.

The LWC production is being performed by students in Brock's "Children's Theatre" class, which explores various aspects of children's drama and then performs plays for area

Charlotte's Web will be performed at 7 p.m. CT Thursday, Nov. 14, in V.P. Henry Auditorium, 210 Lindsey Wilson St. For more information, contact Robert Brock at or (270) 590-4803.

LWC To Present 'Pippin' Nov. 20-22 And Nov. 24th

The Lindsey Wilson College Theatre Program will present the award-winning musical Pippin Nov. 20-22 and Nov. 24 in V.P. Henry Auditorium. The play is directed by Lindsey Wilson College Assistant Professor of Theatre Robert Brock.

Pippin is the story of a young man, Pippin, and his father, Charlemagne -- both real-life figures from the Middle Ages. But that's where the story's similarity to history ends. The musical -- which was written by Stephen Schwartz, who also wrote Godspell and Wicked -- is about Pippin's search for meaning in a seemingly dispirited world.

The play -- which opened on Broadway in 1973 and was revived earlier this year -- has won four Tony Awards.

Brock -- who directed Godspell in 2012 at LWC -- says Pippin is also about the magic of theater.

"Pippin is about life in the theater. It's about magic of theater, the magic of illusion, the magic an actor has to bring an audience along on a story," Brock said. "And in that story, in the story of Pippin, the character of Pippin ... sets out to find his

As part of cast members' preparation for the LWC production, they attended a performance of the revival on Broadway and also had a workshop with a cast member from

"They learned how intense those people work, how good they are at what they do, and how much they train," Brock said. LWC student Jeremy Cloyd of Tompkinsville, Ky., who plays Pippin said that Pippin especially appeals to young people because the musical's story is about self-discovery.

"I like Pippin because it relates to who I am and who were are as a college student," Cloyd said. "You don't go into Pippin and read through Pippin and get to do Pippin without seeing this journey to find fulfillment -- this journey that we all go on. ... You see Pippin get scared, and you see Pippin get anxious and nervous, and then you see him get real excited and fall back down on his face."

Brenna Murray of Russell Springs, Ky., plays the Leading Player -- the character in the troupe who helps guide Pippin on his journey. Brenna says she has learned a lot of life lessons from working on the show.

"Finding what's right within your heart ... is kind of a big lesson that I've learned," she said. "Do what you feel is right, maybe not so much what other people are telling you."

Pippin will be performed at 7 p.m. CT Nov. 20-22 and 2 p.m. CT Nov. 24 in V.P. Henry Auditorium, 210 Lindsey Wilson St. For ticket information, contact Robert Brock at or (270) 590-4803. Follow the show at @PippinLWC2013.

The Cast: Brenna Murray of Russell Springs, Ky. (Leading Player); Jeremy Cloyd of Tompkinsville, Ky. (Pippin); Lake Salsbury of Campbellsville, Ky. (Charles); Hoffman of Glasgow, Ky. 2014 4-H Country Ham Project

Adair County Extension Office

Do you like to eat country ham? Would you would like to learn how country ham is processed and process your own country ham? If the answer is YES to these questions, then the 4-H Country Ham project is for you.

WHAT

4-H members throughout the state spend several months preparing their hams for the Fair, where their meat is judged by commercial country ham producers according to its smell, roundness, color, and texture.

WHEN

To sign up for the project, youth and parents must complete the Afghanistan, and the and the Lindsey Wilson Country Ham Project Agreement and pay the $55.00 fee. Starting sometime in January, youth will meet to start curing their hams. This year will be cure them in the Adair County 4-H Ham House. Youth will also have to attend regular meetings to complete the required six hours of trainings to learn about hams and the curing process. In August, the ham will be taken to the Kentucky State Fair to be judged and youth will give a speech.

AFTER THE HAMS ARE CURED

Youth are required to give a presentation on any aspect of the project such as nutrition or value added. In addition, the processors evaluate ham on such factors as leanness, shape, appearance, and aroma. The combined presentation and judging scores determine the overall winner. This takes place during the Kentucky State Fair.

BENEFITS

Youth develop valuable technical merit, communications, research and organizational skills from the presentations. Persistence and responsibility are among the traits 4-H members develop during the nine months they cure hams at the processing plant. Youth also learn to appreciate the importance of value added to a raw commodity. And, there's a financial benefit. All participants also receive a State Fair premium.

Cost

Participants pay a $55.00 fee This year each youth will be able to keep both hams or keep one of the hams and the second ham will be auctioned off at an event. The livestock club will get 10% of the sale to use with the club and 10% will go to the Ham Scholarship. Auction money will be divided equally between the members who participate in the ham project.

Failure to complete the project will results in forfeiture of the 2 hams and the $55.00 fee.

The deadline to sign up for the Country Ham project is December

Adair County is limited to 20 participants, so this will be a first come - first served sign up. Applications can be picked up at the Adair County Cooperative Extension Service located at 409 Fairground Street.

4-H Shooting Sports Meeting

There will be a Shooting Sports Meeting for all returning youth on Tuesday, November 19 at 5:30 pm at the Adair County Sportsman Club. This meeting is for all youth who have participated in the 4-H Shooting Sports program this past year. Be sure to bring your equipment to this meeting.

There will be a meeting for new youth who would like to participate in the Shooting Sports program on Thursday, December 12 at 6 pm. The site for the meeting will be announced next week. This meeting for any youth who has never participated in the shooting sports program before but would like to start. The 4-H Shooting Sports program is open to youth ages 9-18 and offers the following discipline: Trap, Black Powder, Rifle, Archery, BB, Air Rifle and Pistol, 22 Pistol, and Hunter's Challenge.

Educational programs of the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, color, age, sex, religion, disability, or national origin.

Leigh Anne Florence is Kentucky born, Kentucky bred, Kentucky educated, a Kentucky Colonel, and the Kentucky author of the popular series, Woody, The Kentucky Wiener. A native of Murray, Kentucky, Florence is a 1990 graduate of Calloway County High School. In 1996 she received her Masters of Music Education from Murray State University. She now resides in Shepherdsville, Kentucky with husband Ron and a host of animals, most notably her black and tan miniature dachshund, Woody, who is the star character in her children's series, Woody, The Kentucky Wiener.

After seven years as a public school music teacher, Florence resigned from her teaching duties to concentrate on writing and public speaking. Leigh Anne, accompanied by Ron and the entire wiener dog gang, spends her days in schools, libraries, and other venues speaking on Woody's Five Ways to Be Successful. In addition to schools and libraries, Leigh Anne has become an in-demand speaker for church events, women's' groups, and community

Four Blue Raiders were perfect from the free-throw line, with the team making 17-of-19 free throws total. Williams was 5-5, hitting two key shots late to secure the win. Horne and Clark were both 4-4, while Dusan Pantovic went 2-2.

Lindsey Wilson took control early, leading by as many as six points. Taylor would fight back, but the Trojans' 14-13 lead would be their only one of the half. Lindsey Wilson put together a 5-0 run and held on to go into halftime up 28-26.

Taylor (1-1) was led by Josh Riikonen with 18 points and Ben Raichel with 16.

The second half went back-and-forth with multiple ties. Lindsey Wilson led 58-55 in the final minute when a potential game-tying three-pointer by Taylor was negated by a defensive foul away from the ball was called before the shot. This is an article that I'm surprised I need to write. Well, more accurately, I'm surprised it's an article that I can write and not have it sound foolish. I know this is a newspaper, and my job is to cover events and bring those stories to you folks, but here's a bit of information that isn't news at all: Kentucky is a basketball-crazed state.

Whether you bleed Kentucky Blue, live-and-die with the Louisville Cardinals, support the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers or hitch your wagon to other in-state programs like Eastern, Murray, Morehead, Bellarmine, Transy, Centre, NKU, Lindsey Wilson or Campbellsville, the Bluegrass state is rivaled only by states like Indiana or North Carolina for their love of roundball. In fact, I'm willing to wager that last sentence made your blood boil a bit. After all, no one loves hoops like we Kentuckians, right? Point proven.

Why then, is the greatest level of basketball on the planet not more well-received here? We pack elementary schools, churches and rec centers on Saturday mornings and week nights for Little League games, hoot and holler like madmen over middle school competitions, and turn out in droves to support our various local high school squads. All of that, of course, is on top of our completely unparalleled love for the college game.

But the NBA is a different story. A few of you reading this may follow The Association, but by-and-large, my experience has been that Kentuckians simply have no interest in professional basketball. A casual conversation among strangers can quickly turn to the Cats or Cards in any location from church to the mall, but a remark about the Knicks or Lakers or Celtics or Heat would likely receive an odd stare and no discussion. If anything, the person would likely tell you they're "just not into pro ball," or some similar comment.

I've heard the reasons. Everyone from family members and friends to coworkers and twitter followers have chimed in, telling me how the NBA players don't care about the game, or that it's too much one-on-one, or that the teams don't play defense. While everyone is obviously entitled to their own opinion, I do have to question what NBA games they have been watching.

The games I watch have far more teamwork on both ends of the floor. The pick-and-roll game, swinging and reversing of the ball, cuts from the perimeter and passing in transition are all far superior in the NBA. On defense, the communication, rotation, help defense and both perimeter and interior man-to-man far exceed the often zone-heavy college game.

As for effort and player investment, I must again defend the NBA. These are professionals. This is their livelihood. These are men who have worked their entire lives to achieve this dream, and who are constantly defending their position against a hungry and talented player attempting to take it and achieve their own dream. These men see each other more than they see their families, and the friendship that is undoubtedly formed makes it difficult to believe that they simply don't care. The level of competition reflects that.

Speaking of competition, the talent, ability and athleticism in the NBA is off the charts. These players are completely ridiculous and seem almost superhuman. Check TNT on Thursday night. There are two games, one starting at 7 p.m., and the other beginning after the first game, but somewhere in the neighborhood of nine o'clock. Watch either or both of those games, and count how many times you exclaim 'wow!' or have your jaw drop. As someone who loves basketball, I fail to see how that product doesn't have you glued to Look, I understand that we don't have a professional team in the state. The closest teams are either the Indiana Pacers or the Memphis Grizzlies. We don't have a franchise that runs through our veins, and it makes complete sense why folks aren't born with that I'm no different. I've said before that if you gave me the choice between a UK title or the Lakers never winning another game, I'd take my Cats 100-percent of the time. Those college programs are part of who we are as a people in this state. But that love for those programs equates to a love of the game, and there is no better version of the game of basketball than the NBA.

I know some of you probably used to watch it. I know some of you have tried to give it a shot, but hear me out. As a fan of basketball, give the NBA a real chance this season. The league is as good as it has been in a long time. There are young superstars like LeBron James and Kevin Durant. There are grizzled veterans like Kobe Bryant and Kevin Garnett. There are even former Kentucky standouts like Anthony Davis, John Wall, Eric Bledsoe, DeMarcus Cousins and others that are leading their respective franchises now if your UK fanhood is that strong.

So try it one last time. Watch a couple games, pick a team to follow, or just keep up with the Kentucky guys. Whether it's the high-flying acrobatics, the lightning-quick defense, or the seemingly never out-of-reach nature that allows either team a chance to win in the closing minutes, there's bound to be something a die-hard hoops fan from the Basketball Capitol of the World can

The plan worked. The super-secret code that last week's column was written in disguised my predictions perfectly and the players who clearly read them were unable to decipher my expectations. Again, you don't have to thank me. It was either Mark Twain or Spiderman that said "With great power comes great responsibility," and I don't plan on letting Mr. Twain or Spidey down. Let's make it fantasy squad, do you? two good weeks in a row.

Here's who you probably should not unstart this week.

Chris Ivory, RB, New York Jets: He's been a perpetually frustrating and oft-injured disappointment, but Ivory has been solid when on the field this year. The Jets have been as Jekyll and Hyde as their coach, but when they focus and attempt to run the ball they've been successful.

This week against the Buffalo Bills, the Jets have a divisional opponent who ranks 22 against the run. With rookie Geno Smith performing like a rookie at times, the Jets should lean on the run, and that means opportunities for Ivory-if he can stay healthy throughout the game and avoid breaking a nail.

Nick Foles/Riley Cooper/DeSean Jackson, QB/WR, this week. Yes, the same Washington team that made whichever Flacco in the offseason. McCown is still playing and Christian Ponder look like actual NFL QBs. With the Philly passing game hitting its stride, and both WRs having big play ability, you need no further explanation.

Roddy White, WR, Atlanta Falcons: Let's face it, you've been opportunities. The problem is that those opportunities will consist holding onto him all year, just waiting for him to be healthy. Well, of 11 Bears (read: not actual bears) swarming him.

he finally is-sort of, and has a fair matchup with the Buccaneers

Yes, that means he goes up against Revis, but it also means he plays a team that is completely terrible. Matt Ryan is looking to get back on track, and he's probably tired of leaning on former Louisville player Harry Douglas. That should mean a heavy dose of These are the guys you should most likely definitely put somewhere other than the starting line up:

Mike Wallace, WR, Miami Dolphins: With the Dolphins having a ridiculously bad logo and a team that's in complete turmoil, that should be enough reason to bench basically everyone on the team. Factor in Monday night's loss to the previously winless Bucs, a game in which they had two (yes, two) rushing yards, and yet supposed top receiver Mike Wallace had an abysmal game, and it becomes even more clear.

With no rushing yards, your top receiver has to outperform guys named Matthews, Hartline and Clay. And while this week he might, the entire organization is unpredictable. Plus, you don't really want to watch a team wearing those uniforms play in order to track your

The Minnesota Vikings: That's right, all of 'em. Hopefully you weren't relying on anyone but Peterson and maybe Greg Jennings anyway, but this is the week to sit them as they play the Seattle Seahawks. With the Saints continuing to win, the Seahawks are in a battle for homefield advantage, and that means no overlooking even the puniest opponent.

As a team with no QB, poor WRs, and a superhuman RB, the most physical defense in the league is going to be geared up to stop All Day, well...all day. I know it's basically impossible to sit Peterson, but if you have anyone at all to start instead, I'd kind of, sort of, in all likelihood, try to do that. Maybe.

Ray Rice, RB, Baltimore Ravens: Here's another first round pick that belongs on the ben—oops, erm, not-starting line up list. The Ravens offense has been terrible all season, which is stunning Philadelphia Eagles: The Eagles play the Washington Racial Slurs considering the brilliant $860 trillion dollar contract they gave Joe

The biggest sufferer of the sputtering offense has been Ray Rice. Well, his fantasy owners have actually suffered more, but let's not split the hairs growing out of Flacco's mole. Against the Bears this week, in what is sure to be a frozen bruiser, Rice will get ample
